AURA OPEN SOURCE IS ARCHIVED

As of March 2019, the Aura framework is no longer open source.

Salesforce continues to actively support Aura components, but this repository is read-only.

Salesforce has introduced a new programming model for the Lightning Component framework called Lightning Web Components. This programming model is designed for building fast components using modern JavaScript and web Standards.

Lightning web components and Aura components can coexist and interoperate on a page.

- To learn more about Aura components, start with the Aura Components Basics module in Trailhead.
- For more details, see the Lightning Aura Components Developer Guide.

If you're a Salesforce employee, look at the Aura Help Chatter group on GUS for more relevant documentation for internal development.
